1 NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION FOR PROVISIONAL RELIEF

2 Please take notice that on December 20, 2017, 8:00 a.m., at 450 Golden Gate Avenue, San 3 Francisco, California, Courtroom 8, plaintiffs in the above-captioned actions will, and hereby do, move 4 for provisional relief enjoining defendants from implementing the September 5, 2017 memorandum 5 rescinding the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program (“the Rescission”). Plaintiffs will 6 demonstrate that (1) they are likely to succeed on the merits of their claims under the Administrative 7 Procedure Act (“APA”), (2) the Rescission is causing irreparable harm, and (3) the balance of equities 8 and the public interest weigh heavily in favor of provisional relief in the form of returning to the status 9 quo existing prior to the Rescission.

10 As the Court held in its Order Re Motion to Complete Administrative Record (Dkt. No. 79), the 11 administrative record filed by defendants (Dkt. No. 64) is incomplete and must be expanded.
12 Defendants’ compliance with that ruling has been stayed by the court of appeals. Nonetheless, as 13 provided in the Court’s scheduling order and because of the urgency caused by defendants’ arbitrary 14 selection of March 5, 2018 as the termination date for DACA, plaintiffs now move on the basis of the 15 current incomplete administrative record, the discovery they obtained prior to the court of appeals’ stay, 16 and the declarations and exhibits submitted in connection with this motion and the accompanying 17 request for judicial notice. Plaintiffs will supplement their motion if the court of appeals permits 18 expansion of the administrative record or if discovery reveals additional relevant information. As 19 demonstrated below, however, the current record establishes that plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the 20 merits of their claim that the rescission of DACA was arbitrary, capricious, and not in accordance with 21 law. Plaintiffs seek injunctive relief at this time only as to their APA claims, but maintain their other 22 constitutional, statutory, and equitable claims for a later stage of this case.

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR PROVISIONAL RELIEF

INTRODUCTION

Since 2012, the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (“DACA”) program has enabled nearly 800,000 young people who were brought into the United States as children to live and work in this country without fear of deportation.¹ Since the program was established, DACA recipients have relied on its protections to become medical residents and teachers, serve in the U.S. military, open businesses and earn degrees, start families, and purchase homes. Yet on September 5, 2017, defendants rescinded DACA, telling its beneficiaries that “DACA was fundamentally a lie,” Appendix (“App.”) at 1869-70 (Duke Statement), and that they should “prepare for and arrange their departure from the United States,” id. at 2199–2200 (Talking Points). The Rescission already is causing catastrophic and irreparable harm to DACA recipients, as the threat of deportation—to countries where they have not lived since they were children—forces them to make wrenching choices whether to leave their schools, jobs, and even their U.S. citizen children and other family members. The harm also extends to their loved ones, employers, schools, and communities. The Rescission is unjust and unlawful, and it violates the fundamental prohibition on arbitrary agency action imposed by the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”).

The APA requires courts to set aside agency action that is “arbitrary, capricious, or otherwise not in accordance with law.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A). This standard requires agency action to be both reasonable and reasonably explained. The Rescission is neither. The Rescission contains only a single vague sentence of justification: “Taking into consideration the Supreme Court’s and the Fifth Circuit’s rulings in the ongoing litigation, and the September 4, 2017 letter from the Attorney General, it is clear that the June 15, 2012 DACA program should be terminated.” AR 255. This conclusory assertion fails the requirement that the basis for agency action “be clearly disclosed and adequately sustained,” SEC v. Chenery Corp., 318 U.S. 80, 94 (1943) (Chenery I), especially for an action threatening the expulsion of nearly 700,000 current DACA recipients from their country.

1 The government's empty explanation of the Rescission echoes its failure to consider the 2 Rescission's consequences. The government's decision fails to acknowledge the human and economic 3 havoc that it will inflict on DACA recipients, their families, schools, employers, employees, clients, and 4 communities. The record further reveals that the Department of Homeland Security ("DHS") never 5 evaluated the benefits of DACA when rescinding the program. The absence of reasonable consideration 6 or explanation is particularly appalling where, as here, an agency is reversing a "prior policy [that] has 7 engendered serious reliance interests." Perez v. Mortg. Bankers Ass'n, 135 S. Ct. 1199, 1209 (2015).
8 Reasonable decision-making in these circumstances demands a "more detailed justification than what 9 would suffice for a new policy created on a blank slate." FCC v. Fox Television Stations, Inc., 556 U.S.
10 502, 515 (2009). The government's one-sentence justification for rescinding DACA fails to meet this 11 standard, contradicting its own statements to the Ninth Circuit and the Supreme Court asserting that 12 DACA is both lawful and sound policy, as well as its decision eight months ago to leave DACA intact.

13 The government's failure to consider relevant factors or plausibly explain the basis for the 14 Rescission suggests that its proffered justifications are pretextual. Inconsistent and shifting explanations 15 for the Rescission reinforce this conclusion. For example, although the government has sought to 16 defend the Rescission as a response to purported "litigation risk," the author of the Rescission 17 memorandum testified that responding to "litigation risk" would be "the craziest policy you could ever 18 have as a department." App. at 1928-26 (Hamilton Dep. 207:20-208:11). Agency action that is based 19 on pretext is arbitrary by definition and must be set aside.

20 Finally, the Rescission was accomplished without the procedural steps required by law. The 21 Rescission constitutes a substantive rule subject to the APA's notice and comment requirements, 5 22 U.S.C. § 553, which are designed to ensure that agency action proceeds on the basis of relevant factors.
23 See also 5 U.S.C. § 604(a) (requiring consideration of effects on small entities). Had the government 24 considered such factors—including the Rescission's devastating impact on DACA recipients and their 25 families, and its broader consequences for local governments, employers, educators, and the economy—26 the Rescission could not reasonably have been adopted.

27 This Court should grant provisional relief enjoining defendants' illegal action and preserving the 28 status quo pending a final judgment in this action.

BACKGROUND

A. History of Deferred Action

DACA is consistent with a series of deferred action programs dating back half a century. The government has long recognized that “there simply are not enough resources to enforce all of the rules and regulations presently on the books” and that “[i]n some situations, application of the literal letter of the law would simply be unconscionable and would serve no useful purpose.” App. at 1594 (Bernsen Memo). Accordingly, consistent with their authority to “[e]stablish[] national immigration enforcement policies and priorities,” 6 U.S.C. § 202(5), DHS and previously the INS have frequently exercised discretion not to remove otherwise removable immigrants. App. at 1822-23 (Johnson Letter).

Consistency and administrative convenience have often led the government to exercise its discretion programmatically. Since at least 1956, the government has implemented numerous forms of “discretionary relief,” including parole, temporary protected status, deferred enforced departure, extended voluntary departure, and deferred action. Administrative Record (“AR”) (Dkt. No. 64-1) 15.

- In 1956, President Eisenhower “paroled” into the United States roughly 1000 foreign-born orphans who had been adopted by American citizens overseas but were precluded from entering the United States because of statutory quotas, App. at 1602 (Eisenhower Letter — Orphans), as well as tens of thousands of Hungarian refugees after the unsuccessful Hungarian revolution, App. at 1603 (Eisenhower Letter — Hungarians). In both cases, Congress eventually passed laws enabling the paroled individuals to become lawful permanent residents. See Act of Sept. 11, 1957, Pub. L. No. 85-316, § 4(d), 71 Stat. 639, 640 (orphans); Act of July 25, 1958, Pub. L. No. 85-559, § 2, 72 Stat. 419, 419-20 (Hungarian refugees).
- That same year, the Eisenhower Administration granted “extended voluntary departure” to nonimmigrants present in the United States who had sought, but not received, “Third Preference” visas based on exceptional ability in the arts and sciences. When the INS rescinded this policy sixteen years later with a perfunctory explanation that the program was “having an increasingly unfavorable effect on the domestic job market,” a federal court held that the rescission was ineffective because it did not comply with the APA’s notice-and-comment procedures, even though the original policy had not been published in the Federal Register. United States ex rel. Parco v. Morris, 426 F. Supp. 976, 980 n.8, 983, 984, 986 (E.D. Pa. 1977).
- The Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, and Nixon Administrations paroled more than 600,000 Cubans in the United States through a series of discretionary programs. For example, in 1961, the Kennedy Administration established the Cuban Refugee Program, which directed the routine admission of Cubans under the Attorney General’s parole authority. See App. at 1604 (Kennedy Letter). This program ended through an agreement between the United States and Cuba, followed by legislation providing lawful permanent residence for the individuals who had been paroled under the program. Cuban Adjustment Act, Pub. L. No. 89-732, §1, 80 Stat. 1161 (1966).
- In 1962, in response to famine in China, President Kennedy established the Hong Kong Parole Program to provide extended voluntary departure to 15,000 Chinese refugees. App. at 1605 (USCIS Refugee Timeline). This program ended in 1966 with passage of the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1965, which for the first time provided for the regular admission of refugees.

- In 1987, President Reagan instituted the Family Fairness Program, which provided extended voluntary departure to children whose parents were in the process of legalizing their immigration status under the Immigration Reform and Control Act, Pub. L. No. 99-603, 100 Stat. 3359 (1986). App. at 1607 (1987 INS Analysis). In 1990, President George H. W. Bush expanded the program to spouses of such immigrants. Id. at 1612-13 (1990 INS Analysis). Collectively, the Family Fairness Program extended relief to approximately 1.5 million people, estimated to be 40 percent of the undocumented population at the time. Id. at 1613. The Family Fairness Program ended with the passage of the Immigration Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-649, 104 Stat. 4978, providing a path to permanent residence for the beneficiaries of the program.
- In 1997, the Clinton Administration established a deferred action program for individuals self-petitioning for relief under the Violence Against Women Act of 1994. App. at 1640-46. The George W. Bush Administration similarly provided deferred action to certain applicants for T visas (victims of human trafficking) and U visas (victims of crimes such as domestic violence) in 2002 and 2003, respectively. Id. at 1650-51. These programs are still in place, see id. at 1651, and the deferred action programs for T visa and U visa applicants have been codified, see 8 C.F.R. § 214.11(k)(1), (k)(4), (m)(2) (T visa applicants); 8 C.F.R. § 214.14(d)(2) (U visa applicants).
- The George W. Bush Administration also established a deferred action program in 2005 temporarily granting relief to thousands of foreign students affected by Hurricane Katrina who, because of the hurricane, could not satisfy the requirements of their student visas. App. at 1661-62. Because this program was initiated in response to a specific event, USCIS made clear from the outset that all benefits would expire on February 1, 2006. Id.
- In 2009, the Obama Administration established a deferred action program providing relief to widowed spouses who had been married to U.S. citizens for less than two years and therefore could not obtain permanent residence through their spouses. Id. at 1664-71. Several months later, Congress eliminated the statutory requirement that had prompted the establishment of the program and USCIS accordingly withdrew the program as “obsolete.” Id. at 1672-82 (Neufeld Memo).

A chart summarizing the 17 prior deferred action programs is attached as Addendum A.

This history underscores three important points. First, programmatic grants of deferred action have been common for half a century, across many presidential administrations. Second, the programmatic use of deferred action has gone largely unchallenged. Until the Texas DAPA litigation in 2014, there had been no judicial challenge to the creation of any prior deferred action program. See Br. of Former Federal Immigration and Homeland Security Officials as Amici Curiae in Support of the United States at 3, United States v. Texas, 136 S. Ct. 2271 (2016) (No. 15-674), 2016 WL 922865 (“While [deferred action] policies have at times generated political controversy, until recently their legal underpinnings did not.”).

1 Third, the Rescission is the first time the government has terminated a deferred action program
2 and subjected its existing beneficiaries to deportation. Virtually all of the prior programs ended either 3 because a statute or regulation was enacted to protect the recipients, or because the program was 4 designed from the outset to address a temporary disruption (e.g., the Hurricane Katrina program). In the 5 single instance where the executive branch attempted to terminate a deferred action program without 6 providing an opportunity for notice and comment, a court found a violation of the APA. See Parco, 426 7 F. Supp. at 985.

8 B. The Creation of DACA

9 On June 15, 2012, then-Secretary of Homeland Security Janet Napolitano issued a memorandum 10 establishing DACA (the “2012 DACA Memorandum”). See AR 1–3. Under DACA, individuals who 11 were brought to the United States as children and met certain criteria could apply for deferred action for 12 renewable two-year terms. Id. The 2012 DACA Memorandum explained that DACA covers “certain 13 young people who were brought to this country as children and know only this country as home” and 14 that our immigration laws are not “designed to remove productive young people to countries where they 15 may not have lived or even speak the language.” Id. at 1–2.

16 Eligibility for DACA was limited to individuals who (1) came to the United States under the age 17 of sixteen; (2) had continuously resided in the United States since June 15, 2007, and were present in the 18 United States both on June 15, 2012 and on the date they requested DACA; (3) were in school, had 19 graduated from high school, had obtained a GED, or had been honorably discharged from the United 20 States military or Coast Guard; (4) had clean criminal records and were not a threat to national security 21 or public safety; (5) were under the age of 31 as of June 15, 2012; and (6) did not have lawful 22 immigration status. See AR 1. To apply for DACA, eligible individuals were required to provide the 23 government with sensitive personal information, such as their home addresses and fingerprints, submit 24 to a rigorous DHS background check, and pay a considerable fee. App. at 1744-45, 47 (USCIS FAQs).
25 Applicants then were evaluated on a case-by-case basis. See AR 2.

26 A DACA determination results in an initial two-year deferral, which DHS stated from the outset 27 would be “subject to renewal, in order to prevent low priority individuals from being placed into 28 removal proceedings or removed from the United States.” AR 3. DHS established a straightforward

1 renewal process and “strongly encourage[d]” DACA recipients to submit renewal requests in advance of 2 the relevant expiration date. App. at 1756-57 (USCIS FAQs).²

3 Understanding that eligible individuals might be reluctant to step forward and voluntarily 4 disclose information which, absent DACA, could facilitate their removal from the United States, the 5 government launched an extensive outreach campaign to promote applications and renewals. App. at 6 1742-61, 1762-64, 1785, 1799 (USCIS DACA Outreach). The government repeatedly promised that 7 information provided in connection with the program would not be used for immigration enforcement 8 purposes absent special circumstances. Id. at 1763-64, 1747, 1772 (DACA Toolkit).

9 C. Benefits of DACA

10 DACA has conferred important benefits on recipients. Most directly, DACA recipients are 11 permitted to reside in the United States and are protected from arrest or detention. Ariz. Dream Act
12 Coal. v. Brewer, 757 F.3d 1053, 1058–59 (9th Cir. 2014); see also AR 2. During the period of deferred 13 action, DACA recipients do not accrue time for “unlawful presence” for purposes of the immigration 14 law’s bars on re-entry. See 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)–(C).

15 Under longstanding regulations, immigrants benefiting from deferred action may seek social 16 security numbers and employment authorization. App. at 1742-45 (USCIS FAQs); AR 3; see also 17 8 C.F.R. § 274a.12(c)(14). DACA recipients also became eligible for “advance parole,” allowing them 18 to apply to travel abroad and return lawfully to the United States. See App. at 1787-88 (USCIS Toolkit); 19 1758-59 (USCIS FAQ); see also 8 C.F.R. § 212.5(f). Advance parole has permitted DACA recipients to 25 ² To qualify for renewal, DACA recipients were required to meet just three basic criteria: (1) they 26 must not have left the United States without advance parole; (2) they must have continuously resided in 27 the United States after submitting their DACA applications; and (3) they must not have been convicted 28 of serious or repeated crimes, or otherwise pose a threat to national security or public safety. App. at 1742, 1757 (USCIS FAQs).

1 visit ailing family members, attend births and funerals, and participate in educational, cultural, and 2 employment-related conferences. App. at 2202, Topic 3.³

3 DACA recipients also became eligible to receive certain public, private, and practical benefits.
4 For example, the individual plaintiffs have obtained driver's licenses, medical insurance, research 5 funding and tuition benefits. App. at 2203–04, Topic 6; see also 8 U.S.C. §§ 1611(b)(2)–(3), 1621(d); 6 Ariz. Dream Act Coal. v. Brewer, 81 F. Supp. 3d 795, 811 (D. Ariz. 2015).⁴ DACA also has enabled 7 recipients to open bank accounts, obtain credit cards, and purchase homes and vehicles. App. at 2201, 8 Topic 2.

9 DACA has been transformative for beneficiaries and their families and communities. See, e.g., 10 App. at 1373-74 (Suárez-Orozco Decl. ¶¶ 7-8); App. at 0363-68 (Gonzales Decl. ¶¶ 18-32). As the 11 government has recognized, DACA has enabled hundreds of thousands of young people “to enroll in 12 colleges and universities, complete their education, start businesses that help improve our economy, and 13 give back to our communities as teachers, medical professionals, engineers, and entrepreneurs—all on 14 the books.” App. at 1822-23 (Johnson Letter); App. at 2201, 2203, Topics 1, 5. Even more 15 fundamentally, DACA has provided recipients with a sense of dignity and security that carries 16 demonstrable benefits to their mental and physical health, family well-being, and ability to make life 17 plans. App. at 2202-03, Topic 4.

18 D. The Rescission of DACA

19 In December 2016, Secretary of Homeland Security Jeh Johnson publically stated that 20 “representations made by the U.S. government, upon which DACA applicants most assuredly relied, 21 must continue to be honored.” App. at 1822-23 (Johnson Letter). And initially, even after the change in 26 ⁴ DACA permits otherwise ineligible individuals in California to obtain regular driver's licenses.

27 See Cal. Veh. Code §§ 12801(a)-(b), 12801.5, 12801.6(a)-(b). California also provides “AB 60” driver's 28 licenses to undocumented immigrants without DACA, see Cal. Veh. Code § 12801.9, but such licenses are “not acceptable for official federal purposes.” Id. § 12801.9(d)(2). DACA recipients also can obtain unemployment insurance benefits, see Cal. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1264(a)(2).

1 administrations, Secretary of Homeland Security John Kelly in February 2017 specifically exempted 2 DACA from the administration's broad repeal of other immigration directives, AR 230, and 3 characterized "DACA status" as a "commitment . . . by the government towards the DACA person," 4 App. at 1841. President Trump himself emphasized that "dreamers should rest easy" and agreed that the 5 "policy of [his] administration [is] to allow the dreamers to stay." Id. at 1853.

6 No court has ever held DACA to be unlawful. Yet, in June 2017, government officials, 7 including Attorney General Sessions, began communicating with attorneys general from several states 8 that had previously challenged another deferred action program, Deferred Action for Parents of 9 Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents ("DAPA"). App. at 2033-34 (Batalla Vidal Interrogatory 10 Response). Those discussions culminated in a June 29, 2017 letter from nine state attorneys general to 11 Attorney General Sessions, threatening to challenge DACA in court unless the federal government 12 rescinded the program by September 5, 2017. AR 238-40.⁵ A group of 20 other attorneys general sent a 13 competing letter to President Trump urging him to maintain DACA, asserting that the arguments against 14 the program were "wrong as a matter of law and policy." App. at 2089 (Becerra Letter).

15 On September 4, 2017, Mr. Sessions sent a one-page letter to Acting Secretary of Homeland 16 Security Elaine Duke asserting that DACA "was effectuated . . . without proper statutory authority" and 17 "was an unconstitutional exercise of authority by the Executive Branch." AR 251. He noted that DAPA 18 had been "enjoined on a nationwide basis in a decision affirmed by the Fifth Circuit on the basis of 19 multiple legal grounds and then by the Supreme Court by an equally divided vote," and suggested that 20 DACA might encounter the same result. Id.

21 The next day, the Attorney General held a press conference where he "announce[d] that the 22 program known as DACA . . . is being rescinded." App. at 1866 (Sessions Press Conf.). As in his letter 23 to the Acting Secretary, the Attorney General asserted that DACA was an unconstitutional exercise of 24 authority by the executive branch and "vulnerable to the same legal and constitutional challenges that 25 the courts recognized with respect to the DAPA program." AR 251. He also claimed that DACA had

26
27 ⁵ On September 1, 2017, Tennessee Attorney General Herbert H. Slatery III reversed course and 28 decided Tennessee would not join the threatened expansion of the suit, citing "a human element to this [issue]" that "should not be ignored." App. at 1859-60 (Slatery Letter).

1 “contributed to a surge of unaccompanied minors on the southern border that yielded terrible
2 humanitarian consequences.” Id. This was nonsensical; DACA eligibility was restricted to a fixed 3 group of individuals who had lived continuously in the United States for at least five years since June 4 15, 2007 and were present in the United States on June 15, 2012; DACA could not have led to any 5 changes at the border in 2017.

6 Minutes after the Attorney General’s press conference, Acting Secretary of Homeland Security 7 Duke issued a memorandum formally rescinding the DACA program. See AR 252–56. The Rescission 8 instructed DHS to immediately stop accepting DACA applications or approving new applications for 9 advance parole; to accept renewal applications only from individuals whose current deferred action 10 would expire on or before March 5, 2018, and to accept such renewals only through October 5, 2017; 11 and to allow individuals’ DACA to expire beginning March 5, 2018. AR at 255.

12 Secretary Duke issued an accompanying statement asserting that the government had decided to 13 end DACA rather than “allow the judiciary to potentially shut the program down completely and 14 immediately.” App. at 1869-70 (Duke Statement). Secretary Duke also expressed “sympath[y]” and 15 “frustrat[ion]” on “behalf” of DACA recipients and asserted that “DACA was fundamentally a lie.” Id.

16 E. Harm from the Rescission

17 The Rescission is causing irreparable injuries right now that will only worsen with time.
18 Because the Rescission threatens nearly 700,000 deeply-rooted immigrants with deportation from the 19 United States, its consequences are enormous and multi-faceted. The accompanying Appendix presents 20 extensive evidence of the severe harm that is being and will be inflicted by the government’s action.
21 The discussion below can only begin to describe the Rescission’s damaging effects.

22 1. Direct Legal Consequences

23 As a result of the Rescission, eligible individuals were prevented from applying for DACA, and 24 others were unable to gather sufficient funds in time to pay the renewal fee by the abrupt October 5, 25 2017 cutoff. App. at 2209, Topics 19, 21. As a result, eligible individuals already have been denied the 26 benefits of the program. Id. DACA recipients have already lost the ability to seek advance parole and 27 are therefore precluded from traveling outside the United States. App. at 2210, Topic 23. Each day beginning March 5, 2018, an average of more than one thousand individuals will lose DACA and immediately become vulnerable to arrest, detention, and removal. App. at 2097 (CAP Study). If they are removed, most of these individuals will become subject to a 10-year bar on re-entry because they accrued more than one year of “unlawful presence” prior to the creation of DACA. In some cases, DACA recipients will be subject to a permanent bar if, in addition to one year of “unlawful presence,” they were previously ordered removed or granted voluntary departure and then later re-entered. See 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)–(C).
28

2. Injuries to Individual DACA Recipients

The Rescission has already inflicted severe harm on DACA recipients and their families. DACA recipients are experiencing anxiety, depression, and fear because of the Rescission. App. at 2205, Topic 13.⁶ This is taking an immediate toll on DACA recipients’ well-being and affecting their studies, work, and families. App. at 2206-07, Topics 12-13. The University of California has observed an increase in demand for mental health services, which it cannot fully meet. App. at 2202, Topic 8; see also id., Topic 7 (allocation of scarce resources). And understandably so: because of the program’s age restrictions, DACA recipients are mostly young adults, now making decisions whether to get married, start families, take mortgages, attend college or graduate school, start businesses, or change careers. App. at 2204-06, Topics 9-10. Of course, hundreds of thousands of DACA recipients already have made such life-changing decisions in reliance on DACA, and now face devastating personal, professional, and economic losses as a result of the government’s precipitous reversal.

The Rescission carries immediate economic and professional consequences. DACA recipients have invested enormous effort and financial resources into building their lives and careers in this country, which they now stand to lose. App. at 2205-06, Topics 9-10. They face the loss of educational and employment opportunities, and even those early in their two-year DACA grants face immediate losses from the unavailability of advance parole. App. at 2204-05, 2208, Topics 9-10, 23. The Rescission has already prevented more than 70 recipients who have pending advance parole applications

⁶ As one researcher found, the physical and emotional manifestations of stress can include chronic headaches, ulcers, sleep loss and eating disorders, and thoughts of suicide. App. at 362 (Gonzales Decl. ¶ 13).

1 from studying abroad and presenting research. App. at 1479 (Vazquez-Ramos Decl. ¶¶ 6-7). For 2 example, Joel Sati—described as a “once-in-a-decade” doctoral candidate and academic prospect in 3 jurisprudence and social policy who had a pending advance parole application at the time of the 4 Rescission—has already been deprived of important opportunities to present his research abroad. See 5 App. at 656-57 (Kutz Decl. ¶ 13); App. at 875 (Morrill Decl. ¶ 21); App. at 1322-23 (Sati Decl. ¶¶ 39-6 41).

7 DACA recipients are being forced—right now—to make momentous and irreversible decisions 8 about their educational and professional paths. For example, plaintiff and first-year UC Irvine law 9 student Viri Chabolla Mendoza is struggling to decide whether to continue making the personal and 10 financial investments required to attend law school, because without a work authorization, the 11 Rescission will limit or eliminate her ability to work as an attorney, App. at 113 (Chabolla Decl. ¶ 69), 12 as it will for other DACA recipient law students, who have been incurring significant debt to finance 13 their legal education. App. at 448-49 (Gorjian Decl. ¶¶ 15-16). Medical and doctoral students—14 including plaintiffs New Latthivongskorn and Norma Ramirez—are wrestling with similar decisions.
15 App. at 670–71 (Latthivongskorn Decl. ¶¶ 47–49); App. at 1161 (Ramirez Decl. ¶ 52). Medical students 16 at UC are facing the choice of self-selecting out of their only real opportunity to obtain a medical 17 residency position after years of medical training, lest they be rendered unable to care for their patients
18 when their work authorization expires. App. at 65-67 (Braddock Decl. ¶¶ 4-5, 8); App. at 723-24
19 (Lucey Decl. ¶¶ 13-18); App. at 1357-59 (Stobo Decl. ¶¶ 6, 10, 12); App. at 0519-20 (Huang Decl. ¶ 20 16). And plaintiff Saul Jimenez already has been forced to abandon plans to pursue a master’s degree.
21 App. at 0557 (Jimenez Decl. ¶ 45). Many other DACA recipients are being forced to make choices now 22 that may adversely impact their ability to pursue their education and career objectives. App. at 2203-04, 23 Topics 9-10.

24 Beyond its immediate career consequences, the Rescission is imposing economic and financial 25 harms on DACA recipients, many of whom are already looking to minimize or unwind the long-term 26 financial commitments—including student loans and mortgages, office leases, and employee hires—27 they made in reliance on the program. App. at 2205-06, 2209, Topics 10, 20. The Rescission, by 28

canceling work authorizations, will deprive DACA recipients of the ability to work legally, and in many cases render them unable to continue their education. App. at 2203-04, Topics 9-10.

The Rescission is also causing irreparable harm to the parents, children, and siblings of DACA recipients. See, e.g., App. at 2206, Topic 11. Approximately 26 percent of DACA recipients have U.S.-citizen children, while approximately 17 percent have a U.S.-citizen spouse, and nearly 60 percent have a U.S.-citizen sibling. App. at 1510 (Wong Decl. ¶ 31). DHS's decision that DACA recipients should "prepare for and arrange their departure from the United States," App. at 2199-2200 (Talking Points); App. at 1510-12 (Wong Decl. ¶ 32), therefore presents DACA recipients with the agonizing decision whether to uproot their loved ones from their country of citizenship or leave them behind. As a result of the Rescission, almost two hundred thousand U.S.-citizen children face the terrifying prospect that their parents may soon be deported. The Rescission has caused some DACA recipients not to begin families at all. For example, as a result of the Rescission, plaintiff Dulce Garcia has put on hold her dream of adopting a child and becoming a mother. App. at 267-68 (Garcia Decl. ¶¶ 64, 700).

3. Injuries to State and Local Governments and Educational Institutions

The Rescission is also harming DACA recipients' schools and employers, and the cities, counties, and states where they reside and work. App. at 2206-10, Topics 14, 17, 18, 22. For example, some DACA recipients have decided to cancel their enrollment at the University of California because the Rescission forecloses their ability to work during and after their education. App. at 0512 (Holmes-Sullivan Decl. ¶ 18). The University of California and other educational institutions such as the California State University and the California Community Colleges, thus face the loss of their investments in time, financial aid, research dollars, housing benefits, and other support, and the loss of DACA students and employees is diminishing the research expertise, exchange of ideas, and cultural vitality that are central to their academic missions. App. at 2205, Topic 14; see also id. at 2206, Topic 12. And public school districts are also struggling to effectively educate their student populations given decreased attendance and the fear and stress caused by the Rescission. App. at 353-54 (L. Gonzales Decl. ¶¶ 4-5, 10); id. at 784-85 (Maxwell Decl. ¶¶ 9, 11).

1 The interests of the plaintiff States, County of Santa Clara, and City of San Jose are also being 2 irreparably harmed by the Rescission. The DACA program has improved the economic welfare of 3 recipients by providing access to higher-skilled jobs, better job mobility, higher wages, and greater 4 purchasing power. App. at 1500 (Wong Decl. ¶ 12); see also App. at 2201-02, 2203, Topics 2, 5.
5 Recent data show that 91 percent of DACA recipients are currently employed (93 percent for those 25 6 years and older), and hourly wages of DACA recipients have increased by 69 percent (81 percent for 7 those 25 years and older since the program began). App. at 1500, 1503 (Wong Decl. ¶¶ 13, 18).

8 As DACA employees leave the workforce, the economy as a whole will continue to suffer 9 enormous losses. DACA has greatly benefited state and local economies, including plaintiff States, 10 plaintiff County of Santa Clara, and plaintiff City of San Jose, by increasing DACA recipients' earnings
11 and growing the tax base. App. at 2206-07, Topic 17. As entrepreneurs and employees, DACA 12 recipients are achieving financial independence and purchasing cars and homes, thereby generating 13 additional economic activity, along with tax revenue for state and local governments. App. at 2199-14 2200, 2206-07, Topics 2, 17. Over a ten-year period, it is estimated that the Rescission will cost the 15 federal government $60 billion in lost revenue and $215 billion in lost GDP. App. at 0073 (Brannon 16 Decl. ¶ 11). The comparable figures for California alone are $19 billion and $71 billion. App. at 0073 17 (Brannon Decl. ¶¶ 11, 14). State and local governments, including plaintiffs States, County of Santa 18 Clara, and City of San Jose, also employ DACA recipients to provide important public services. App. at 19 2209, Topic 18.

20 As DACA recipients continue to lose employment authorization, many will lose their health 21 insurance. App. at 716 (Lorenz Decl. ¶ 7); App. at 1310 (Santos Toledo Decl. ¶ 26); App. at 1324 (Sati 22 Decl. ¶ 48); App. at 1448 (Tabares Decl. ¶ 14). The resulting increase in the uninsured population will 23 place an increased burden on emergency healthcare services in plaintiff States, plaintiff County of Santa 24 Clara, and plaintiff City of San Jose, and will reduce overall public health as fewer people will seek 25 medical care because they lack insurance or because they fear being reported to immigration authorities.
26 App. at 2206, Topic 15.

27 The separation of families caused by the Rescission will likely bring more children into 28 government child welfare services programs, further increasing government costs. App. at 0779

1 (Márquez Decl. ¶ 18). Uncertainty about parental immigration status contributes to heightened levels of 2 stress and anxiety in children. For example, one study found that mothers’ eligibility for DACA led to 3 significant improvements in their children’s mental health—improvements that will be lost because of 4 the Rescission. App. at 0814–16 (Mendoza Decl. ¶¶ 4, 6–8); App. at 0464–67 (Hainmueller Decl. ¶¶ 4– 5 11).

6 Public safety will also suffer. Effective local law enforcement depends on a trusting relationship 7 between police and the communities they serve. App. 2206, Topic 16. DACA recipients face particular 8 vulnerabilities once their DACA grants end, given the information they have already turned over to 9 federal immigration authorities. See App. at 2210, Topic 24. If DACA recipients lose their protection, 10 and fear that interactions with police could end with their deportation, they will be less likely to call the 11 police if they are victimized or if they witness crimes. App. at 2206, Topic 16. By forcing these 12 particularly vulnerable individuals back into undocumented status, the Rescission damages the public 13 safety mission of law enforcement agencies. Id.

14 STANDARD OF REVIEW

15 A preliminary injunction is warranted where the plaintiffs establish that (1) they are “likely to 16 succeed on the merits,” (2) they are “likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary 17 relief,” (3) “that the balance of equities” tips in their favor, and (4) that an “injunction is in the public 18 interest.” All. for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1131 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting Winter v.
19 Nat. Res. Def. Council, 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008)).

20 ARGUMENT

21 PLAINTIFFS ARE LIKELY TO SUCCEED ON THE MERITS

22 Agency action cannot stand if it is arbitrary, capricious, or contrary to law, or if it is done 23 without appropriate process. The unexplained rescission of DACA cannot withstand the slightest 24 scrutiny, and therefore plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits.

25 I. Defendants’ Rescission of DACA Is Arbitrary and Capricious.

26 The Administrative Procedure Act “sets forth the procedures by which federal agencies are 27 accountable to the public and their actions subject to review by the courts.” Franklin v. Massachusetts, 28 505 U.S. 788, 796 (1992). To ensure that agency actions are reasonable and lawful, a court must

1 conduct a “thorough, probing, in-depth review” of the agency’s reasoning and a “searching and careful” 2 inquiry into the factual underpinnings of the agency’s decision. Citizens to Preserve Overton Park, Inc.
3 v. Volpe, 401 U.S. 402, 415–16 (1971). After undertaking that review, a court “shall” set aside agency 4 action if it is “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law.” 5 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A); see also Butte Env’tl. Council v. U.S. Army Corps of Eng’rs, 620 F.3d 936, 945 (9th 6 Cir. 2010).⁷ As with formal rulemaking, final agency action achieved through an informal process is 7 subject to review under § 706 of the APA. See, e.g., Perez, 135 S. Ct. at 1209 (arbitrary and capricious 8 review is available for agency rules that do not proceed through notice and comment); Sacora v.
9 Thomas, 628 F.3d 1059, 1068–69 (9th Cir. 2010) (same).

10 Agency action should be set aside as arbitrary and capricious if the agency fails to explain the 11 basis of its decision, fails to consider all relevant factors and articulate a “rational connection between 12 the facts found and the choice made,” or fails to offer a “reasoned explanation” for departures from 13 preexisting policies. Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass’n v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 463 U.S. 29, 43
14 (1983). In cases where the purported rationale for agency action is pretextual, it must be set aside
15 without further inquiry. See, e.g., N.E. Coal. on Nuclear Pollution v. Nuclear Regulatory Comm’n, 727 16 F.2d 1127, 1130–31 (D.C. Cir. 1984); Squaw Transit Co. v. United States, 574 F.2d 492, 496 (10th Cir.
17 1978); Pub. Citizen v. Heckler, 653 F. Supp. 1229, 1237 (D.D.C. 1986). Here, defendants violated the 18 APA on each of these grounds.

19 A. Defendants Failed to Explain the Basis for the Rescission.

20 It is a “simple but fundamental rule of administrative law” that “a reviewing court . . . must judge 21 the propriety of [agency] action solely by the grounds invoked by the agency,” and not post hoc grounds 22 articulated during litigation. SEC v. Chenery Corp., 332 U.S. 194, 196 (1947) (Chenery II). Meaningful 23 judicial review cannot proceed unless “the grounds upon which the administrative agency acted [are]

26 ⁷ An action under the APA requires final agency action that is ripe for review. In the motion to 27 dismiss filed in Batalla Vidal v. Duke, No. 16-cv-41196 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 27, 2017), ECF No. 95-1, 28 defendants did not challenge finality or ripeness. If defendants take a contrary position in this case, plaintiffs will respond either in their opposition to defendants’ motion to dismiss or in their reply supporting the instant motion.

1 clearly disclosed and adequately sustained.” Chenery I, 318 U.S. at 94. Accordingly, an agency action
2 must be set aside unless its basis is “set forth with such clarity as to be understandable.” Chenery II, 332 3 U.S. at 196.

4 The four-page Rescission memorandum flunks this basic test, inflicting grievous harm on 5 millions of people without providing any clear explanation why. The bulk of the document is a two-6 and-a-half page “Background” section that provides a generic discussion of the history of the DACA
7 and DAPA programs, including a brief discussion of the DAPA litigation in the Fifth Circuit. It 8 summarizes the Attorney General’s one-page September 4, 2017 letter, and quotes his assertions that 9 DACA was “effectuated without statutory authority,” and was “an unconstitutional exercise of authority 10 by the Executive Branch.” DHS’s entire purported reasoning for rescinding DACA is then set forth in a 11 66-word paragraph, which states in full:

12 Taking into consideration the Supreme Court’s and the Fifth Circuit’s rulings in the 13 ongoing litigation, and the September 4, 2017 letter from the Attorney General, it is clear 14 that the June 15, 2012 DACA program should be terminated. In the exercise of my 15 authority in establishing national immigration policies and priorities, except for the 16 purposes explicitly identified below, I hereby rescind the June 15, 2012 memorandum.

17 AR 255.

18 This cryptic statement does not remotely meet the APA’s requirement that an agency provide a 19 reasoned basis for its actions. See Amerijet Int’l, Inc. v. Pistole, 753 F.3d 1343, 1350 (D.C. Cir. 2014) 20 (“[C]onclusory statements will not do; an agency’s statement must be one of reasoning.” (internal 21 citations omitted)). Indeed, the memorandum barely states any rationale for the decision at all. The 22 reference to the Attorney General’s one-page letter is not reasoning—the Attorney General’s letter 23 contains only a conclusory assertion that DACA is illegal. AR 251. Just as perplexing is the reference 24 to the Supreme Court’s purported “ruling” in the “ongoing litigation”—presumably referring to the four-25 four affirmance in the Texas DAPA case. This even split was no “ruling” at all, let alone a ruling 26 regarding DACA. See Neil v. Biggers, 409 U.S. 188, 192 (1972) (“Nor is an affirmance by an equally 27 divided Court entitled to precedential weight.”).

28 Because DHS failed to provide any comprehensible rationale for its decision, the Rescission must be set aside. See Chenery II, 332 U.S. at 196–97 (“It will not do for a court to be compelled to guess at the theory underlying the agency’s action; nor can a court be expected to chisel that which must

1 be precise from what the agency has left vague and indecisive.”); Nat’l Ass’n of Home Builders v.
2 Norton, 340 F.3d 835, 849 (9th Cir. 2003) (same).

3 B. Defendants Failed to Consider All Relevant Factors and Articulate a Rational 4 Connection Between the Facts Found and the Choice Made.

5 To survive review under the arbitrary-and-capricious standard, an agency must “demonstrate a 6 rational connection between the facts it found and the choice it made.” Nw. Env’tl. Def. Ctr. v.
7 Bonneville Power Admin., 477 F.3d 668, 687 n.15 (9th Cir. 2007); Humane Soc’y of U.S. v. Locke, 626 8 F.3d 1040, 1051 (9th Cir. 2010) (same). Although courts “defer to agency expertise on questions of 9 methodology, they do not ignore an agency’s failure to address factors pertinent to an informed 10 decision.” Bair v. Cal. State Dep’t of Transp., 867 F. Supp. 2d 1058, 1065 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (Alsup, J.).
11 The Rescission addresses none of the considerations appropriate to an action of this magnitude, nor does 12 it articulate a rational connection between the facts found and the action undertaken.

13 Defendants failed to consider any of DACA’s numerous benefits before issuing the Rescission.
14 See App. at 2199-2202, Topics 1-6; App. at 1935-36 (Nealon Dep. 151:21-152:13). Defendants ignored 15 DHS’s own finding, when creating DACA, that “many of [the] young people [eligible for DACA] have 16 already contributed to our country in significant ways.” AR 2. Defendants likewise failed to evaluate 17 the enormous economic benefits of DACA. See App. at 73-74 (Brannon Decl. ¶¶ 10-16); App. at 2205-
18 08, Topics 14, 15, 17, 18, 22; App. at 1873-75 (McCament Dep. 12:14-14:7); App. at 1936-37, 1938 19 (Nealon Dep. 152:15-153:2, 154:9-22) (acknowledging benefits).

20 Defendants also failed to assess—at all—the devastating impact that the Rescission will have on 21 DACA recipients, their families and friends, their employers, employees, clients, or universities, or the 22 public at large. See State Farm, 463 U.S. at 52 (“reasoned decisionmaking” requires agencies to “look 23 at the costs as well as the benefits” of their actions). The fundamental consequence of the Rescission—24 that nearly 700,000 young people will be vulnerable to deportation to countries that many cannot 25 remember—is not even mentioned. The collateral consequences—the loss of work, the loss of the 26
27
28

1 ability to travel, the damage to DACA recipients’ mental and physical health, the destruction of human 2 capital and potential—are not addressed either.⁸

3 Defendants also ignored the economic and social costs associated with the Rescission.
4 Rescinding DACA will cause massive economic harm, depleting the country’s workforce and reducing 5 the demand for goods and services. The American economy will lose an estimated $215 billion in GDP
6 over ten years—a loss equivalent to the entire economic output of Oregon—and the federal government 7 alone will lose an estimated $60 billion as a result of the Rescission. See App. at 73 (Brannon Decl. ¶ 8 11); see also id. ¶ 14. None of these costs were referenced in the Rescission or incorporated into the 9 agency’s decision-making process. See Michigan v. EPA, 135 S. Ct. 2699, 2707 (2015) (ignoring cost, 10 even where the relevant statutes “leave[] agencies with flexibility,” constitutes arbitrary and capricious 11 action).

12 Defendants also ignored the Rescission’s infringement on core constitutional interests. For 13 example, DACA recipients are already being deprived of the ability to travel internationally or practice 14 particular professions. See, e.g., Lester v. Parker, 235 F.2d 787, 789 (9th Cir. 1956) (recognizing the 15 “constitutionally protected right to work”); Greene v. McElroy, 360 U.S. 474, 492 (1959) (recognizing 16 the constitutionally protected right to “hold specific private employment and to follow a chosen 17 profession”); Kent v. Dulles, 357 U.S. 116, 125-26 (1958) (recognizing that the right to travel abroad is a 18 constitutionally protected liberty interest). The interests of educational institutions in choosing whom 19 they will educate and to create a rich and diverse academic climate informed by DACA recipients’ 20 perspectives—central aspects of academic freedom protected by the First Amendment—are also being 21 seriously impaired. *See App. at 504 (Hexter Decl. ¶ 14).*⁹

23
24 ⁸ See, e.g., App. at 724-25 (Lucey Decl. ¶¶ 19-20) (Rescission impacting medical students’ 25 decisions as to whether to enter National Residency Matching Process); App. at 186 (Doe 1 Decl. ¶ 19) 26 (Rescission causing uncertainty about ability to become a lawyer); App. at 1324 (Sati Decl. ¶¶ 45-46)
27 (Rescission causing uncertainty about ability to complete professional school).

28 ⁹ Academic freedom is a First Amendment right that protects a university’s right “to determine for itself on academic grounds who may teach, what may be taught, how it shall be taught, and who may be admitted to study.” Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. Bakke, 438 U.S. 265, 312 (1978) (internal citation omitted).

1 The administrative record here reflects none of the consideration of the benefits or costs that 2 normally would be relevant to agency decisions. Indeed, the decision to rescind DACA was reached 3 after just two-and-a-half hours of meetings and a handful of follow-up conversations. See, e.g., App. at 4 1878-80, 1884-89, 1890-92 (McCament Dep. 72:22-75:17, 124:22-128:16, 130:2-132:7); App. at 1911-
5 26 (Hamilton Dep. 98:6-113:15). The decision was made without input from any of a host of interested 6 or knowledgeable sources. See, e.g., App. at 1942-45 (Nealon Dep. 165:3-168:18); App. at 1904-06
7 (McCament Dep. 240:20-242:5); App. at 2023-24 (Neufeld Dep. 187:6-188:8). Indeed, the agency did 8 not even consult with its own personnel responsible for immigration enforcement. See App. at 2192-93, 9 2196 (Miller Dep. 99:12-19, 100:3-7, 204:1-21).

10 As far as the record reveals, there was no policy rationale for the Rescission at all. Where, as 11 here, there “are no findings and no analysis . . . to justify the choice made,” the APA “will not permit” a 12 court to accept the agency’s decision. Burlington Truck Lines, Inc. v. United States, 371 U.S. 156, 167 13 (1962); see also Crickon v. Thomas, 579 F.3d 978, 985 (9th Cir. 2009) (same).

14 C. Defendants Failed to Offer a Reasoned Explanation for Their Reversal of Policy.

15 When the government reverses its own earlier policy, it has an even greater burden to justify its 16 actions. The agency must “acknowledge and provide an adequate explanation for its departure from 17 established precedent, and an agency that neglects to do so acts arbitrarily and capriciously.” Jicarilla 18 Apache Nation v. U.S. Dep’t of the Interior, 613 F.3d 1112, 1119 (D.C. Cir. 2010) (internal citation 19 omitted); see also Encino Motorcars, LLC v. Navarro, 136 S. Ct. 2117, 2126 (2016) (agency cannot 20 depart from prior policy without “explaining its changed position”). Thus, reversing a pre-existing 21 policy requires a “more detailed justification than what would suffice for a new policy created on a 22 blank slate.” Fox, 556 U.S. at 515.

23 Here, the Rescission represents a 180-degree reversal of DHS’s prior position on the merits of 24 deferred action and the legality of DACA. In introducing the program in 2012, the agency explained 25 that DACA was “necessary to ensure that [DHS’s] enforcement resources are not expended on [] low 26 priority cases but are instead appropriately focused on people who meet our enforcement priorities.” AR 27 1. It further explained:
28

Our Nation’s immigration laws must be enforced in a strong and sensible manner. They are not designed to be blindly enforced without consideration given to the individual circumstances of each case. Nor are they designed to remove productive young people to countries where they may not have lived or even speak the language. Indeed, many of these young people have already contributed to our country in significant ways. Prosecutorial discretion, which is used in so many other areas, is especially justified here.

AR 2. The Rescission did not address these findings at all.

With respect to the program’s legality, just two years ago, the government defended DACA before the Ninth Circuit, stating that DACA was “a valid exercise of the Secretary’s broad authority and discretion to set policies for enforcing the immigration laws, which includes affording deferred action and work authorization to certain aliens who, in light of real-world resource constraints and weighty humanitarian concerns, warrant deferral rather than removal.” United States’ Br. as Amicus Curiae, Ariz. Dream Act Coal. v. Brewer, 855 F.3d 957 (9th Cir. 2017), petition for cert. filed, No. 15-15307 (U.S. Mar. 31, 2017), 2015 WL 5120846 at *1.¹⁰ DHS made similar arguments before the Fifth Circuit in 2014. See Br. for United States, Crane v. Johnson, 783 F.3d 244 (5th Cir. 2015) (No. 14-10049), 2014 WL 10657553; see also Br. for United States at 23, Crane, 2012 WL 6633751 (“It is in the public interest to focus the government’s limited resources to the enforcement of its highest priority cases—such as aliens who pose national security risks, serious criminals, and repeat offenders, rather than to aliens who arrived in the United States as children and have no criminal record.”).

Because the Rescission did not address the policy merits of DACA at all, it did not begin to evaluate the reliance interests engendered by the program. Perez, 135 S. Ct. at 1209 (government must provide special justification “when its prior policy has engendered serious reliance interests that must be taken into account”). The policy justification for the program has become ever stronger as DACA recipients, in reliance on the program, have become more educated, better-employed, and even more embedded in the fabric of American life. See supra Background § C. Since 2012, DACA recipients have structured their lives around the program, making decisions to get married, start families, take out

¹⁰ The Ninth Circuit concluded that Arizona’s policy of rejecting documents issued to DACA recipients as proof of authorized presence for the purpose of obtaining a state driver’s license was preempted by federal law, but declined to consider the legality of DACA. Ariz. Dream Act, 855 F.3d at 975.

1 loans, enroll in graduate programs, and build careers in reliance on the government’s promises and 2 representations. See, e.g., App. at 2199-2201, Topics 1, 2, 4, 5.

3 Employers, employees, and institutions likewise have made important decisions in reliance on 4 the government’s representations about DACA. For example, educational institutions like UC have 5 admitted and hired DACA recipients, with the expectation that they would be able to live and teach, 6 research, pursue professional careers, or otherwise work in the United States for the foreseeable future.
7 See, e.g., App. at 2205-06, Topic 14. As DACA recipients are being forced to abandon their work and 8 studies—in many cases dropping out of degree programs—their employers and educational institutions 9 are losing the benefits they derive from the contributions of DACA recipients, as well as the value of the 10 considerable time, effort, energy, and financial resources invested in them. See, e.g., App. at 2205-06, 11 2208, Topics 14, 22. The elimination of DACA will force “systemic, significant changes” to these 12 institutions, see Encino Motors, 136 S. Ct. at 2126, disrupting education, research, and health care as 13 DACA-recipient teachers, scientists, and hospital workers can no longer fulfill those roles.

14 The Rescission’s failure to weigh the reliance interests created by DACA renders it untenable.

15 D. The Rescission Appears to Rely on a False Legal Premise.

16 In his one-page letter, the Attorney General opined that DACA was illegal and should be 17 rescinded. In the Rescission memorandum, the Acting Secretary stated that she was taking this letter 18 “into consideration.” AR 254–55. To the extent the Rescission depends on a conclusion that DACA 19 was illegal, that conclusion is wrong: DACA was a lawful exercise of DHS’s enforcement discretion.
20 And if, contrary to the Attorney General’s letter, DACA is legal, then the Rescission must be set aside.
21 See, e.g., Massachusetts v. EPA, 549 U.S. 497, 532 (2007); Chenery I, 318 U.S. at 94 (“[A]n order may 22 not stand if the agency has misconceived the law.”); Safe Air for Everyone v. EPA, 488 F.3d 1088, 1101
23 (9th Cir. 2007); Locke, 626 F.3d at 1051; see also Phillips Petroleum Co. v. FERC, 792 F.2d 1165, 24 1170–71 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (rejecting agency interpretation of statute where agency’s position “was based 25 solely on its erroneous reading” of a Supreme Court case and agency “believed itself bound by” that 26 case).

1 1. DACA Is a Lawful Exercise of Enforcement Discretion

2 Contrary to the Attorney General’s assertion that DACA was an unconstitutional exercise of 3 authority by the Executive Branch, DACA was a lawful exercise of well-established enforcement 4 discretion that has been conferred by Congress. Deferred action programs like DACA are a lawful 5 exercise of the Secretary’s broad statutory authority to “[e]stablish[] national immigration enforcement 6 policies and priorities,” 6 U.S.C. § 202(f), and to carry out the “administration and enforcement of th[e] 7 INA] and all other laws relating to the immigration and naturalization of aliens,” 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a), 8 including by authorizing aliens to be lawfully employed, 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(h)(2).

9 Prosecutorial discretion is well-recognized as important to the enforcement of the immigration 10 laws. See Reno v. Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm., 525 U.S. 471, 490 (1999). This is true both 11 because “[d]iscretion in the enforcement of immigration law embraces immediate human concerns,” 12 such as which individuals “pose less danger than” others, Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 396 13 (2012), and because there are many more removable aliens than there are enforcement resources. See 14 AR 4 (“[A]lthough there are approximately 11.3 million undocumented aliens in the country, [DHS] has 15 the resources to remove fewer than 400,000 such aliens each year.”); see also 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a)(3) 16 (granting DHS Secretary authority to “establish such regulations; . . . issue such instructions; and 17 perform such other acts as he deems necessary for carrying out his authority under the [INA]”).
18 Deferred action is explicitly contemplated in DHS’s regulations and “has become a regular feature of the 19 immigration removal system that has been acknowledged by both Congress and the Supreme Court.”
20 AR 16. As set forth above, DHS has often exercised enforcement discretion on not just an individual 21 but a programmatic basis, dating to the 1950s. See Background § A.

22 DACA is entirely consistent with earlier deferred action programs and is a reasonable exercise of 23 DHS’s enforcement authority under the INA. DACA is explicitly framed as an exercise of prosecutorial 24 discretion. See AR 1 (2012 DACA Memorandum sets forth how “in the exercise of our prosecutorial
25 discretion, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) should enforce the Nation’s immigration 26 laws”). The 2012 DACA Memorandum identifies certain categories of “criteria” that “should be 27 satisfied before an individual is considered for an exercise of prosecutorial discretion.” Id. Some of the 28 criteria provide guidelines for how DHS employees are to exercise their discretion, such as whether the

1 individual “poses a threat to national security or public safety.” Id. Moreover, the 2012 DACA
2 Memorandum instructs DHS officials to take deferred action under the policy only “on an individual”
3 and “case by case basis,” and to give “consideration . . . to the individual circumstances of each case.”
4 AR 2. Just like past deferred action programs, DACA is a use of “[d]iscretion in the enforcement of 5 immigration law” to “embrace[] immediate human concerns” by deprioritizing enforcement for those 6 who were brought to this country as children, have clean records, and have lived continuously in the 7 United States since 2007. Arizona, 567 U.S. at 396. (“The equities of an individual case may turn on 8 many factors, including whether the alien has . . . long ties to the community.”).

9 Merely because the creation of DACA was an act of prosecutorial discretion does not mean, 10 however, that the termination of DACA is unreviewable. First, courts have emphasized that judicial 11 review of general enforcement policies should proceed. See, e.g., Crowley Caribbean Transp., Inc. v.
12 Peña, 37 F.3d 671, 676 (D.C. Cir. 1994) (“[A]n agency’s statement of a general enforcement policy may 13 be reviewable for legal sufficiency where the agency has . . . articulated it in some form of universal 14 policy statement.”); Edison Elec. Inst. v. EPA, 996 F.2d 326, 333 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (distinguishing 15 between a reviewable “Enforcement Policy Statement” and the unreviewable particularized enforcement 16 decision); Kenney v. Glickman, 96 F.3d 1118, 1123 (8th Cir. 1996) (same and collecting cases)). Here, 17 plaintiffs challenge DHS’s wholesale rescission of a program—a clearly justiciable policy choice.

18 Second, DHS’s decision to rescind DACA appears to be based on a legal determination 19 regarding the legality of DACA. Such legal questions fall squarely within the core function of the 20 judiciary; there is “law to apply,” and the policies underlying judicial deference to executive discretion 21 do not come into play. See, e.g., Int’l Longshoremen’s & Warehousemen’s Union v. Meese, 891 F.2d 22 1374, 1378–79 (9th Cir. 1989) (permitting judicial review of advisory opinion and policy statement in 23 light of agency’s interpretation of its organic statute); Edison, 996 F.2d at 333 (explaining that plaintiffs’
24 challenge to agency policy statement involves a challenge to “the [agency’s] interpretation of [the Act] 25 and its implementing regulations . . . Clearly, this interpretation has to do with the substantive 26 requirements of the law; it is not the type of discretionary judgment [that is] shield[ed] from judicial 27 review.”); Pinho v. Gonzales, 432 F.3d 193, 203–04 (3d Cir. 2005) (“purely legal determinations made 28

1 by the agency [] remain subject to judicial review”). Courts can and should say what the law is, rather 2 than abdicating that function to administrative agencies.

3 2. The Texas Decision Is Neither Controlling Nor Persuasive with Respect to 4 DACA

5 The Attorney General’s one-page letter focused on a Fifth Circuit decision affirming a 6 preliminary injunction of DAPA. See AR 51; see also AR 253–255 (citing Texas v. United States 7 (Texas II), 809 F.3d 134 (5th Cir. 2015)). To the extent the Rescission was based on the premise that 8 Texas was controlling or persuasive authority for a finding that DACA was illegal, that premise is 9 mistaken.

10 First, Texas did not even purport to decide the legality of DACA. See, e.g., Texas II, 809 F.3d at 11 172–73 (observing that although district court’s “finding was partly informed by analysis of the 12 implementation of DACA, the precursor to DAPA, any extrapolation from DACA [to DAPA] must be 13 done carefully”); Br. for Pet’rs at 59, Texas, 2016 WL 836758 (“This suit does not challenge the original 14 DACA policy.”).

15 Second, Texas is an out-of-circuit case that does not control this Court or the Ninth Circuit. See,
16 e.g., Int’l Chem. Workers Union Council of the United Food & Commercial Workers Int’l v. NLRB, 467 17 F.3d 742, 748 n.3 (9th Cir. 2006).¹¹ The Supreme Court’s four-four deadlock, see United States v.
18 Texas, 136 S. Ct. 2271 (2016), is not a precedential ruling either. See Neil v. Biggers, 409 U.S. at 192 19 (“If the judges are divided, the reversal cannot be had, for no order can be made.”).

20 Third, the executive branch’s formal public statements affirming DACA’s legality are more 21 persuasive and relevant to evaluating the Rescission than Texas’s provisional evaluation of DAPA. The 22 Office of Legal Counsel expressed its “preliminary view” in 2014 that DACA is “permissible.” AR 21 23 n.8. And the government has vigorously advocated DACA’s legality in court, explaining that the 24 program is “a valid exercise of the Secretary’s broad authority and discretion to set policies for

25
26 ¹¹ The Fifth Circuit issued two decisions in Texas—one denying the government’s motion for a 27 stay pending appeal, see Texas v. United States, 787 F.3d 733 (5th Cir. 2015) (Texas I), and a second 28 affirming a preliminary injunction of the DAPA program, see Texas II, 809 F.3d 134. Both decisions are accompanied by powerful, lengthy dissents. See Texas II, 809 F.3d at 188-219 (King, J., dissenting); Texas I, 787 F.3d at 769-84 (Higginson, J., dissenting).

1 enforcing the immigration laws.” United States’ Br. as Amicus Curiae, Arizona Dream Act, 2015 WL
2 5120846; see also Br. for United States, Crane, 2014 WL 10657553; Br. for United States, Crane, 2012
3 WL 6633751; Br. for Pet’rs at 59–60, Texas, 2016 WL 836758.

4 Fourth, Texas is distinguishable on the facts and the law. DAPA was a deferred action program
5 for certain individuals who were parents of U.S. citizens or lawful permanent residents. See Texas II, 6 809 F.3d at 191 (King, J., dissenting). The Fifth Circuit found that DAPA was not actually discretionary 7 and therefore violated the APA’s notice-and-comment procedures. See id. at 170–78. The same cannot 8 be said for DACA. See Letter to Judge Garaufis from Counsel for Defs. at 5, Batalla Vidal v. Duke, No.
9 16-cv-4756 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 29, 2017) (Dkt. No. 69) (“the original DACA policy itself . . . is an exercise 10 of ‘prosecutorial discretion’ that is ‘a special province of the Executive’”). Indeed, the Fifth Circuit has 11 acknowledged that the 2012 DACA Memorandum “makes it clear that [ICE] Agents shall exercise their 12 discretion in deciding to grant deferred action, and this judgment should be exercised on a case-by-case 13 basis.” Crane v. Johnson, 783 F.3d 244, 254-55 (5th Cir. 2015).

14 Moreover, the Fifth Circuit concluded that DAPA was foreclosed by statute because the INA 15 contained “an intricate process for illegal aliens to derive a lawful immigration classification from their 16 children’s immigration status,” and DAPA was inconsistent with the statutory scheme. Texas II, 809
17 F.3d at 179; see also id. at 186. There is no comparable pathway for individuals brought to this country 18 as children.

19 The Fifth Circuit further suggested that the large number of individuals potentially eligible for 20 DAPA suggested administrative overreach. See id. at 181, 183. But more than one-third of the entire 21 undocumented population was eligible for DAPA, compared with less than ten percent potentially 22 eligible for deferred action under DACA. See id. at 148, 174 n.138.

23 Fifth and finally, any application of the Fifth Circuit’s reasoning to DACA would be unfounded, 24 as the government argued to the Supreme Court.¹² The Fifth Circuit’s ruling depended heavily on the 25 invalid inference that because an allegedly low percentage of DACA applications had been denied based 26 on discretionary reasons, the discretion embedded in the DAPA program might be illusory. See id. at 27

28 ¹² See Br. for Pet’rs, Texas, No. 15-674, 2016 WL 836758 (Mar. 1, 2016).

1 172-76. But it was entirely consistent with the reasonable exercise of discretion for there to be a low
2 denial rate for DACA. As even the Fifth Circuit recognized, “DACA involve[s] . . . self-selecting 3 applicants, and persons who expect[] to be denied relief would seem unlikely to apply.” Texas II, 809
4 F.3d at 174; see also id. (“Eligibility for DACA was restricted to a younger and less numerous 5 population, which suggests that DACA applicants are less likely to have backgrounds that would 6 warrant a discretionary denial.” (footnote omitted)). A declaration from Donald Neufeld, Associate 7 Director for USCIS Service Center Operations confirmed that “deferred action under DACA is a case-8 specific process that necessarily involves the exercise of the agency’s discretion”; identified “several 9 instances of discretionary denials”; and noted “that approximately 200,000 requests for additional 10 evidence had been made upon receipt of DACA applications.” Id. at 175 (alteration and internal 11 quotation marks omitted).

12 The Fifth Circuit also improperly conflated two separate concepts—lawful presence and legal 13 status—in finding DAPA was a grant of legal status foreclosed by the INA. Those are immigration law 14 terms of art that are distinct. “Whereas legal status implies a right protected by law, legal presence 15 simply reflects an exercise of discretion by a public official.” Texas I, 787 F.3d at 774 (Higginson, J., 16 dissenting) (internal citation and emphasis omitted); see also Texas II, 809 F.3d at 199 (King, J., 17 dissenting); Reply Br. for Pet’rs at 16-18, Texas, 2016 WL 75049. DACA does not confer a legal status 18 under the immigration laws, which only Congress can do. Instead, it confers at most lawful presence.

19 In sum, the Rescission cannot be justified on the premise that Texas dictates a finding that 20 DACA was illegal.

21 3. Purported “Litigation Risk” Cannot Justify the Rescission

22 Despite the letter from Attorney General Sessions, the government has not in this litigation nor in 23 Batalla Vidal asserted that DACA was illegal. Instead, it has retreated to the position that DHS could 24 rescind DACA based on mere “litigation risk” stemming from a threat by nine state attorneys general 25 that they would seek to amend their complaint in the Texas case to encompass DACA. This post hoc 26 explanation was not asserted at the time of the Rescission and cannot be accepted as a justification for 27 DHS’s action. Chenery II, 332 U.S. at 196.

1 Nor can the “litigation risk” rationale withstand scrutiny. “Litigation risk,” standing alone, is not 2 a sufficient reason for the federal government to do anything. The senior DHS official responsible for 3 drafting the Rescission has testified that acting on the basis of “litigation risk” is the “craziest policy you 4 could ever have” as a basis for government action. App. at 1928-26 (Hamilton Dep. 207:20-208:11); 5 see also App. at 1938-39 (Nealon Dep. 154:23-155:11) (not aware of any other policy rescinded due to 6 litigation risk); App. at 2025 (Neufeld Dep. 189:8-22) (not aware of termination of other deferred action 7 programs due to litigation risk or illegality).

8 This case and others illustrate the hollowness of the “litigation risk” rationale. Far from 9 eliminating “litigation risk,” the rescission of DACA predictably prompted at least nine lawsuits, 10 including suits by 19 state attorneys general, as well as universities, cities and counties, private 11 individuals, a union, and a civil rights group. App. at 2090 (Becerra Letter). Thus, “[a]t most, the 12 Department deliberately traded one lawsuit for another.” Organized Vill. of Kake v. U.S. Dep’t of 13 Agric., 795 F.3d 956, 970 (9th Cir. 2015) (agency’s desire to avoid litigation did not satisfy its 14 obligation to provide a reasoned explanation for its change in policy); see also Int’l Union, United Mine 15 Workers of Am. v. U.S. Dep’t of Labor, 358 F.3d 40, 44 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (litigation risk was not valid 16 grounds on which to act); California ex rel. Lockyer v. U.S. Dep’t of Agric., 459 F. Supp. 2d 874, 904 17 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (“legal uncertainty alone [is not] a sufficient justification” for agency action); Sierra 18 Club v. Jackson, 833 F. Supp. 2d 11, 34 (D.D.C. 2012) (similar).

19 To tolerate the “litigation risk” rationale—which could apply to virtually any agency action—20 would be to countenance an end-run around the APA. An agency could ignore the policy merits of any 21 issue and simply cite litigation risk as a basis for its action. This is untenable. Cf. Mexichem Specialty
22 Resins, Inc. v. EPA, 787 F.3d 544, 557 (D.C. Cir. 2015) (“The risk is that an agency could circumvent 23 the rulemaking process through litigation concessions, thereby denying interested parties the opportunity 24 to oppose or otherwise comment on significant changes in regulatory policy. If an agency could engage 25 in rescission by concession, the doctrine requiring agencies to give reasons before they rescind rules 26 would be a dead letter.”).

27 Even taking “litigation risk” on its own terms, the administrative record does not contain any 28 intelligent assessment of litigation risk that could withstand APA review. A reasonable litigation risk

1 assessment would have to address the probability of prevailing in the district courts, the courts of 2 appeals, and the Supreme Court, the timing of any resolution and the prospects of a stay of an adverse 3 judgment, and the risks of litigation weighed against the benefits of DACA, among other factors. A 4 reasonable litigation risk analysis would have to consider the government's prior position that DACA 5 was legal. A reasonable analysis would also need to address the government's current position that the 6 legality of deferred action programs such as DACA is non-justiciable. If the government were right 7 about that, then there would be no "litigation risk" justifying the Rescission.

8 The administrative record reflects no consideration of any of these factors. Nor does it reflect 9 any consideration of reasonable policy alternatives that could mitigate "litigation risk" while 10 maintaining the benefits of DACA. The government's "litigation risk" rationale cannot support the 11 Rescission.

12 E. The Announced Reason for the Rescission Was Pretextual

13 The government's failures to provide a clear explanation for the Rescission, to address DACA's 14 benefits, or to justify the government's reversal of position, suggest that the stated reasons for acting are 15 not the true reasons. In addition, the circumstances surrounding the announcement of the Rescission, 16 and subsequent actions by DHS, DOJ, and the White House, show that the Attorney General's 17 articulated reason for the Rescission—the supposed illegality of DACA—is pretextual:

- 18 • The very same day as the Rescission, the President tweeted: "Congress now has 6 months to 19 legalize DACA (something the Obama Administration was unable to do). If they can't, I will 20 revisit this issue!"¹³ But if the rationale for the Rescission were a genuine belief that DACA 21 was illegal, there would be no basis to "revisit this issue" and possibly reinstate an illegal 22 policy.
- 23 • DHS did not immediately terminate DACA. Instead, it announced that it would continue 24 processing renewal applications for an additional month for benefits that expired between 25 September 5, 2017 and March 5, 2018, and would recognize DACA grants already conferred, 26 leaving the program in place for at least an additional six months. If DACA were illegal, 27 DHS would have no basis to leave it in place for months and years.
- 28 • On October 18, 2017, the Attorney General testified to Congress that DACA could be legal under the Texas case if it were implemented "on an individualized basis." See Oversight of the U.S. Department of Justice: Hearing before the S. Comm. on the Judiciary, 115th Cong.

2 justice. If DACA “lacks statutory authority” and was “an unconstitutional exercise of 3 authority by the Executive Branch,” no manner of implementation by DHS could make it 4 legal.

- 5 • The motion to dismiss filed by the government in Batalla Vidal makes no argument that 6 DACA was effectuated without statutory authority or was an unconstitutional exercise of 7 authority, but relies instead on the “litigation risk” justification.
- 8 • The Senior Counselor to the Acting Secretary of DHS, who drafted the Rescission, undercut 9 the litigation risk justification when he testified that a policy of reacting to litigation threats 10 would be the “craziest policy you could ever have” because “you could never do anything if 11 you were always worried about being sued.” App. at 1928-26 (Hamilton Dep. 207:20-208:11).
- 12 • In their motion to dismiss in Batalla Vidal, defendants contend that the rescission of DACA 13 is not reviewable under the APA and that the notice and comment requirement, 5 U.S.C. § 14 553, does not apply to the Rescission. However, if defendants really believed that the Texas
15 decision presented an unmanageable litigation risk, they also must believe that the Texas 16 decision correctly held that a program like DACA is reviewable and that the notice-and-17 comment requirement applies.

18 These facts show that the decision to rescind DACA could not have been based on a good-faith 19 belief that the program was unsupported by legislative authority, was an unconstitutional exercise of 20 authority by the executive branch, or presented unmanageable litigation risk. Cf. Hernandez v. Hughes 21 Missile Sys. Co., 362 F.3d 564, 569 (9th Cir. 2004) (conflicting explanations may serve as evidence of 22 pretext); E.E.O.C. v. Ethan Allen, Inc., 44 F.3d 116, 120 (2d Cir. 1994) (same).

23 The true reason for the Rescission appears to have been revealed on October 8, 2017, when 24 President Trump sent a letter to Congressional leaders setting forth the “Immigration Principles and 25 Policies” that he said “must be included as part of any legislation addressing the status of [DACA]
26 recipients.” App. at 1990-99. The New York Times described the “Principles and Policies” as “a long 27 list of hard-line immigration measures,” including funding for a border wall. App. at 2004. This 28 evidence, linking the Rescission to the administration’s legislative strategy, suggests that the decision to rescind DACA was a cynical ploy to make DACA recipients a bargaining chip in order to secure support for harsh immigration legislation from members of Congress who support DACA recipients and would not otherwise support the administration’s immigration agenda. A complete administrative record and further discovery, if permitted by the court of appeals, will enable the parties to prove or disprove this

1 point.¹⁴ But the current record of shifting explanations is enough evidence of pretext to warrant setting
2 aside the Rescission. See Pub. Citizen, 653 F. Supp. at 1237 (“For an agency to say one thing . . . and do
3 another . . . is the essence of arbitrary action. It indicates that the Secretary’s stated reason may very 4 well be pretextual.” (citation omitted)); see also New England Coal. on Nuclear Pollution, 727 F.2d at 5 1130–31 (agency action arbitrary and capricious where agency’s stated reason does not line up with 6 action); Squaw Transit Co., 574 F.2d at 496 (agency action is arbitrary and capricious where it “does not 7 apply the criteria it has announced as controlling”).

8 II. The Rescission Should Be Vacated Because It Is a Substantive Rule That Did Not Comply 9 with the APA’s Notice and Comment Requirements

10 The Rescission also fails to meet the APA’s procedural requirements. The Rescission is a 11 categorical rule limiting the power of DHS to exercise discretion, and DHS was therefore required to 12 abide by the full panoply of APA procedures including notice and comment in order to promulgate it. It 13 did not do so.

14 Under the APA, substantive rules must go through notice and comment rulemaking before they 15 become effective. San Diego Air Sports Ctr., Inc. v. F.A.A., 887 F.2d 966, 971 (9th Cir. 1989); see also 16 5 U.S.C. § 551(5) (defining “rule making” to include “repealing a rule”). A rule is substantive if it 17 “narrowly limits administrative discretion” or establishes a “binding norm” that “so fills out the statutory 18 scheme that upon application one need only determine whether a given case is within the rule’s 19 criterion.” Colwell v. Dep’t of Health & Human Servs., 558 F.3d 1112, 1124 (9th Cir. 2009) (internal 20 citation omitted). The ultimate question in discerning between substantive rules and non-binding policy 21 statements “is the agency’s intent to be bound.” Municipality of Anchorage v. United States, 980 F.2d 22 1320, 1325 (9th Cir. 1992) (internal citation omitted).

23 The Rescission is a substantive rule at least because it (1) binds DHS and limits its discretion, 24 and (2) bans DACA recipients from applying for and traveling on advance parole.

26
27 ¹⁴ Pretextuality is one of the forms of “bad faith or improper behavior” that warrants discovery 28 from agency decisionmakers. Overton Park, 401 U.S. at 420.

1 There can be no dispute that DHS intends to be bound by the Rescission, and that the Rescission
2 limits the agency's discretion. See Colwell, 558 F.3d at 1124; Cnty. Nutrition Inst. v. Young, 818 F.2d 3 943, 948 (D.C. Cir. 1987) ("cabining of an agency's prosecutorial discretion can in fact rise to the level 4 of a substantive, legislative rule"). The Rescission is a blanket prohibition that DHS and its agents must 5 apply in all DACA cases. As of September 5, 2017, DHS is flatly prohibited from accepting new 6 DACA applications, and as of October 5, 2017, is flatly prohibited from issuing DACA renewals.
7 Unlike DACA, the Rescission makes no exceptions for case-by-case determinations. See, e.g., AR 255
8 (stating that DHS will "reject all DACA renewal requests and associated applications for Employment 9 Authorization Documents filed outside of the parameters" set forth in the Rescission).¹⁵ By its terms, 10 the Rescission thus ensures that new or renewed requests for deferred action will be categorically 11 denied. Such mandatory language evinces a substantive rule. See Anchorage, 980 F.2d 1324 (the 12 "critical factor" in evaluating the substantive nature of an agency action is "the extent to which the 13 challenged [action] leaves the agency, or its implementing official, free to exercise discretion to follow, 14 or not to follow, the [announced] policy in an individual case" (internal citation omitted)); Alaska v. U.S.
15 Dep't of Transp., 868 F.2d 441, 447 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (holding that agency order was a rule in part due to 16 "mandatory language cabining DOT's enforcement discretion"). The Rescission's only reference to 17 DHS's discretion is its discretion to terminate, not continue, grants of deferred action. See AR 255 18 (DHS will "continue to exercise its discretionary authority to terminate or deny deferred action at any 19 time when immigration officials determine termination or denial of deferred action is appropriate").

20 The Rescission is similarly categorical and substantive in banning current DACA recipients from 21 receiving advance parole based on their DACA eligibility. See id. (DHS "[w]ill not approve any new 22 Form I-131 applications for advance parole under standards associated with the DACA program" and 23 "[w]ill administratively close all pending Form I-131 applications" filed under DACA program). The 24

25 ¹⁵ While the face of the Rescission admits no exceptions, DHS's website states that it "will 26 consider DACA requests received from residents of the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico on a case-27 by-case basis." App. at 1894-95 (McCament Dep. 189:15-190:13, 192:18-22) (USCIS not considering 28 whether to accept late applications from other geographic areas subject to natural disasters aside from Puerto Rico and U.S. Virgin Islands); App. at 2011-12 (Neufeld Dep. 113:2-114:18) (similar). See also <https://www.uscis.gov/archive/i-821d>.

1 ban on advance parole is a “binding norm,” such that DHS officials “need only determine whether a 2 given case is within the [the Rescission]’s criterion”; i.e., whether an individual with DACA seeks 3 advance parole. See Colwell, 558 F.3d at 1124.

4 By creating a categorical rule barring DACA recipients from renewing their grants of deferred
5 action and precluding new potential DACA recipients from obtaining deferred action under DACA, 6 DHS promulgated a substantive rule without following the proper procedures including notice and 7 comment, see 5 U.S.C. § 553, and an assessment of effects on small entities, see 5 U.S.C. § 604(a). The 8 Rescission must therefore be set aside. See Paulsen v. Daniels, 413 F.3d 999, 1003-04 (9th Cir. 2005)
9 (concluding that Bureau of Prisons “plainly violated the APA” by promulgating a rule that barred 10 category of prisoners from relief without notice).

11 In this regard, it is irrelevant that the 2012 DACA Memorandum did not go through the notice-12 and-comment process. DACA was an exercise of prosecutorial discretion and not required to go 13 through notice and comment. See 5 U.S.C. § 553(b)(A); Lincoln v. Vigil, 508 U.S. 182, 197 (1993). By 14 contrast, the Rescission does not present itself as an exercise of DHS’s discretion, and in fact prohibits 15 the exercise of discretion in the adjudication of applications for deferred action.

16 In addition, DHS’s obligation to follow notice-and-comment procedures for the Rescission exists 17 whether or not DACA itself went through such procedures. See 5 U.S.C. § 551(5) (defining “rule 18 making” to include “repealing a rule”); see also Consumer Energy Council of Am. v. FERC, 673 F.2d 19 425, 448 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (“[T]he argument that repeal was required because the regulations were 20 defective does not explain why notice and comment could not be provided.”); id. at 447 n.79 (allowing 21 repeal, without notice and comment, of a defective rule “would ignore the fact that the question whether 22 the regulations are indeed defective is one worthy of notice and an opportunity to comment”). As the 23 Ninth Circuit observed, “when the government seeks to repeal a regulation, it is generally not bound for 24 [notice-and-comment] purposes by the way it classified that regulation at the time of its promulgation.”
25 Mada-Luna v. Fitzpatrick, 813 F.2d 1006, 1018 n.12 (9th Cir. 1987).

26 Under strikingly similar circumstances, the blanket rescission of a deferred action program has 27 been found to require notice and comment, even where the deferred action program itself was adopted 28 without such procedures. See Parco, 426 F. Supp. at 980–81 (holding that memorandum revoking

1 existing discretion of immigration officials to extend indefinitely the voluntary departure of certain 2 categories of immigrants must be subjected to notice and comment). Because the rescission in Parco 3 left no discretion for agency officials considering requests for deferred action, it was “in reality a flat
4 rule of eligibility” requiring notice and comment. Id. at 984-85 (distinguishing Noel v. Chapman, 508
5 F.2d 1023 (2d Cir. 1975), which considered a program providing the agency official “sole discretion” 6 over applications for departure extensions).

7 The Rescission illustrates why the notice-and-comment process is so important. The record 8 developed through a proper procedure would have ensured that DHS did not “undo all that it 9 accomplished” through DACA “without giving all parties an opportunity to comment on the wisdom” of 10 that action. See Consumer Energy Council of Am., 673 F.2d at 446. Had DHS considered the evidence 11 that would have been presented in the notice-and-comment process—such as the Rescission’s 12 devastating effects on DACA recipients and their families and its broader consequences for employers, 13 educators, and the economy—the Rescission could not reasonably have been adopted.

14 PLAINTIFFS SATISFY THE REMAINING REQUIREMENTS FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

15 The other preliminary injunction requirements are likewise satisfied because plaintiffs will suffer 16 irreparable harm without provisional relief, the balance of equities tips sharply in their favor, and 17 provisional relief is in the public interest.

18 I. Plaintiffs Face Irreparable Harm.

19 The Rescission is already inflicting severe and irreparable harm on plaintiffs, as discussed above 20 and in the attached Appendix. DACA recipients, including the individual plaintiffs and DACA-recipient 21 UC students, have already lost eligibility to travel using advance parole, in some cases with irreparable 22 consequences for their careers. App. at 2210, Topic 23. They are being forced right now to make 23 decisions with life-altering personal and professional consequences—such as whether to pursue or 24 continue professional educations and whether to forego the process for matching to a medical residency, 25 an opportunity virtually impossible to recover. App. 2204-2206, 2209, Topics 9-12, 20. The “loss of 26 opportunity to pursue one’s chosen profession constitutes irreparable harm.” Ariz. Dream Act Coalition 27 v. Brewer, 855 F.3d 957, 978 (9th Cir. 2017). This irreparable injury is further “exacerbated by 28 Plaintiffs’ young age and fragile economic status.” Id.

1 The Rescission has caused serious emotional harm to the individual plaintiffs and DACA-2 recipient university and community college students, who have lost the security of knowing they will be 3 able to live and work in the United States and are experiencing resulting anxiety, depression, and fear.
4 See App. at 2204-05, Topics 12-13; see also App. at 2202, Topic 8 (University of California has 5 observed increase in demand for mental health services, which it cannot fully meet). These emotional 6 and psychological injuries constitute irreparable harm. See, e.g., Chalk v. U.S. Dist. Court Cent. Dist. of 7 Cal., 840 F.2d 701, 710 (9th Cir. 1988); Norsworthy v. Beard, 87 F. Supp. 3d 1164, 1193 (N.D. Cal.
8 2015). Beyond the losses experienced by individual DACA recipients, the Rescission is harming their 9 affiliated institutions such as the University of California, and cities and states within which they reside
10 and work, causing imminent, irreparable harm to plaintiff States, plaintiff County of Santa Clara, 11 plaintiff City of San Jose, and plaintiff University of California. See, e.g., App. at 2205-07, Topics 14,
12 17. As set forth above, DACA has resulted in the integration of hundreds of thousands of individuals 13 into the American social and economic fabric. The decisions made over the next few months by DACA 14 recipients will have irreparable consequences for their communities and State and local governments, 15 including the immediate losses of valued students, employees, and community members, along with 16 erosion of the gains in economic output, public health, and safety that resulted from DACA. In this 17 situation, “[a] delay, even if only a few months, pending trial represents precious, productive time 18 irretrievably lost.” Enyart v. Nat’l Conference of Bar Examiners, Inc., 630 F.3d 1153, 1166 (9th Cir.
19 2011).

20 II. The Balance Of Equities and the Public Interest Weigh Heavily in Favor of Provisional 21 Relief.

22 The final two elements of the preliminary injunction test—the balance of the equities and the 23 public interest—merge when the government is a party. See League of Wilderness Defs./Blue 24 Mountains Biodiversity Project v. Connaughton, 752 F.3d 755, 766 (9th Cir. 2014). In assessing these 25 factors, courts consider the impacts of the injunction on nonparties as well. See id. at 766.

26 The balance of the equities and the public interest weigh overwhelmingly in favor of provisional 27 relief. DACA recipients are integral contributors to their families, schools, employers, communities, 28 and the United States as a whole. DACA permits recipients to earn a living in the United States, support

1 their families, and attend college. See, e.g., App at 2199-2200, Topic 2; see also App. at 2206-07, Topic
2 17; App. at 224-30 (Essig Decl. ¶¶ 8-10, 12-13); App. at 1347-48 (J. Smith Decl. ¶ 6); App. at 1505, 3 1515-16, 1518-19, 1520-21 (Wong Decl. ¶¶ 21, 43, 49, 55); App. at 2199-2200, 2206-07, Topics 2, 17; 4 see also App. at 1504, 1509 (Wong Decl. ¶¶ 20, 30).

5 Moreover, the harm of taking DACA away from nearly 700,000 current DACA recipients would 6 be a loss of $215 billion in U.S. GDP over the next ten years, App. at 73 (Brannon Decl. ¶ 11), and those 7 losses are beginning now as DACA recipients prepare for the possibility of deportation. Enjoining the 8 rescission of the DACA program and allowing these individuals to continue contributing to their 9 communities and the country at large is in the public interest.

10 An injunction would also further public health and safety, which will suffer due to the 11 Rescission. For example, as individuals lose DACA protection they may become less likely to interact 12 with law enforcement even if they are victimized or witness crimes. See App. at 1342 (Smith Decl. ¶¶ 13 7-8); App. at 1287-88 (Rosen Decl. ¶¶ 3, 5). Without work authorization, DACA recipients will not be 14 able to continue filling crucial positions providing public services. App. at 2209, Topic 18; see also 15 App. at 96 (Carrizales Decl. ¶¶ 9-10); App. at 790-91 (McLeod Decl. ¶ 6); App. at 1109 (Oh Decl. ¶ 6).
16 The Rescission also would cause many DACA recipients to lose health insurance, see App. at 716 17 (Lorenz Decl. ¶ 7); App. at 1310 (Santos Toledo Decl. ¶ 26); App. at 1324 (Sati Decl. ¶ 48); App. at 18 1448 (Tabares Decl. ¶ 14), and an increased uninsured population will burden emergency healthcare 19 services and reduce overall public health as people become reluctant to seek medical care due to lack of 20 insurance or fear of being reported to immigration authorities, see App. 2206, Topic 15; App. at 0177-78
21 (Cody Decl. ¶¶ 11-13); App. at 777, 0779 (Márquez Decl. ¶¶ 12, 17); App. at 0716 (Lorenz Decl. ¶¶ 6– 22 7). The Rescission also will likely contribute to an increase in the number of children using government 23 child welfare services programs, see App. at 0779 (Márquez Decl. ¶ 18), and contribute to heightened 24 levels of stress and anxiety in children whose parents face uncertain immigration status, see App. at 814– 25 16 (F. Mendoza Decl. ¶¶ 4, 6-8); App. at 464-67 (Hainmueller Decl. ¶¶ 4-11).

26 The government will not face any harm if a preliminary injunction is granted. There will be no
27 harm—and much benefit—to the United States if DHS continues to process new applications for DACA 28 status and renewal applications pending a final judgment. Furthermore, the government has no interest

1 in enforcing unlawful rules. See Rodriguez v. Robbins, 715 F.3d 1127, 1145 (9th Cir. 2013) (“[The 2 government] cannot suffer harm from an injunction that merely ends an unlawful practice.”); Arizona
3 Dream Act, 855 F.3d at 978 (“[I]t is clear that it would not be equitable or in the public’s interest to 4 allow the state to violate the requirements of federal law, especially when there are no adequate 5 remedies available.” (quoting Valle del Sol v. Whiting, 732 F.3d 1006, 1029 (9th Cir. 2013))). Moreover,
6 it is estimated that up to 200,000 individuals have had their DACA grants renewed since President 7 Trump took office. App. at 2092 (CAP Study). If the government believed DACA recipients presented 8 a serious harm to its interests, the administration would not have continued granting renewals for almost 9 nine months.

10 Accordingly, both the balance of the equities and the public interest favor provisional relief.

11 * * *

12 Plaintiffs have demonstrated a strong prospect of success on the merits, and have established 13 irreparable harm if the Rescission is permitted to proceed. The balance of equities and the public 14 interest likewise point to a single conclusion: the Court should award provisional relief.

15 16 CONCLUSION

17 For the foregoing reasons, this Court should enjoin defendants from proceeding with the 18 Rescission and should award provisional relief directing the government to restore the DACA program 19 pending adjudication on the merits.

39. Exhibit CCC: Executive Order 12711, available at U.S. State Department, <https://www.state.gov/documents/organization/28450.pdf>.

A Court “must take judicial notice” of adjudicative facts “if a party requests it and the court is supplied with the necessary information.” Fed. R. Evid. 201(c)(2). The Court can judicially notice any “fact that is not subject to reasonable dispute because it: . . . can be accurately and readily determined from sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned.” Fed. R. Evid. 201(b)(2).

Exhibits A, F, G, I-K, N, O, QQ, and ZZ are all government memoranda—many of which are still publicly available on government websites—establishing or discussing the United States’ immigration policies. Exhibit M is a government press release announcing a new deferred action program. Exhibits R-V, RR, UU, VV, WW, and YY are USCIS publications and forms. Exhibit SS is a letter from ICE Director John Morton available on the ICE website. Exhibit TT is a Social Security Administration publication. The Court may take judicial notice of such records and memoranda of government administrative bodies. See Anderson v. Holder, 673 F.3d 1089, 1094 n.1 (9th Cir. 2012) (taking judicial notice of USCIS interpretation guidance); Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 689-

1 90 (9th Cir. 2001) (a court may take judicial notice of undisputed matters of public record); Cnty. of 2 Santa Clara v. Trump, 250 F. Supp. 3d 497, 520 nn.5, 8, 11 (N.D. Cal. 2017) (taking judicial notice of 3 government memoranda and letters); McCray v. Unite Here! Local 19, No. 16-CV-01233-BLF, 2017 4 WL 567319, at *2 n.1 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 13, 2017) (collecting cases).

5 Exhibits E, L, and AAA are government websites that detail past and current policies
6 providing relief from immigration enforcement. Exhibits B-D are public statements of President 7 Eisenhower and President Kennedy that are hosted on a website maintained by the University of 8 California, Santa Barbara, a public university. Specifically, this website is of the American Presidency 9 Project, “the leading source of presidential documents on the internet.” See The American Presidency 10 Project, <http://www.presidency.ucsb.edu/index.php>. Exhibit Q is a statement by President Obama on the 11 White House archived website. Exhibit W is a letter from Secretary Jeh Johnson available on the House 12 of Representatives website. Exhibit AA is a letter from Tennessee Attorney General Herbert H. Slatery 13 III available on the world wide web. Exhibit CC is a prepared statement by Attorney General Jefferson 14 Sessions, available on the Department of Justice website. Exhibit DD is a statement from Acting 15 Secretary Duke available on the DHS website. Exhibit LL is a letter from President Trump found on the 16 White House website. Exhibit BBB is a document posted on the website of the Gerald R. Ford 17 Presidential Library. Exhibit CCC is an Executive Order posted on the U.S. State Department website.
18 Exhibit WW is a letter from California Attorney General Xavier Becerra available on the Office of the 19 Attorney General Website.

20 The Court may take notice of government documents and publications available on 21 websites. As a general matter, “[i]t is not uncommon for courts to take judicial notice of factual 22 information found on the world wide web.” O’Toole v. Northrop Grumman Corp., 499 F.3d 1218, 1224
23 (10th Cir. 2007). The Ninth Circuit has held that it is appropriate to take judicial notice of information 24 “made publicly available by government entities” on their websites. Daniels-Hall v. Nat’l Educ. Ass’n, 25 629 F.3d 992, 998–99 (9th Cir. 2010). See also Lindsey v. United Airlines, Inc., No. C 17-00753, 2017
26 WL 2404911, at *6 (N.D. Cal. June 2, 2017) (Alsup, J.) (taking judicial notice of certificate of merger 27 because it “is a public document and its authenticity can be accurately and readily determined from the 28 Delaware Secretary of State website”); Cnty. of Santa Clara v. Astra USA, Inc., 401 F. Supp. 2d 1022,

1 1024 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (Alsup, J.) (taking judicial notice of a price-control regime described on a 2 Department of Health and Human Services website and a report by the same department).

3 Exhibits KK and PP are transcripts of congressional testimony. In general, 4 “[l]egislative history is properly a subject of judicial notice.” Anderson, 673 F.3d at 1094 n.1. This is 5 also true of testimony given at congressional hearings. See Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Slater, 228
6 F.3d 1147, 1168 n.12 (10th Cir. 2000) (taking “judicial notice of the content of hearings and testimony
7 before [] congressional committees and subcommittees”); see also Cnty. of Santa Clara, 250 F. Supp. 3d 8 at nn. 4, 6, 7, 10 (taking judicial notice of government officials’ press conference statements, press 9 briefings, and interview statements).

10 Because the above documents satisfy the criteria of Rule 201(b) of the Federal Rules of 11 Evidence, the Court must take judicial notice of them pursuant to Rule 201(c)(2) of the Federal Rules of 12 Evidence.

CASE NO. 17-CV-05813-WHA

1 Having considered Plaintiffs' Motion For Provisional Relief, ECF No. ____ ("Plaintiffs' 2 Motion"), IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

- 3 1) Plaintiffs have demonstrated that (a) they are likely to succeed on the merits of their 4 claim under the Administrative Procedure Act that the September 5, 2017 memorandum 5 rescinding the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals ("DACA") program ("the 6 Rescission") should be set aside, (b) the Rescission is causing and will cause irreparable 7 harm absent provisional relief, and (c) the balance of equities and the public interest 8 weigh heavily in favor of provisional relief in the form of returning to the status quo 9 existing prior to the Rescission. Plaintiffs' Motion is therefore granted.
- 10 2) Defendants are enjoined from implementing the Rescission, or any portion thereof.
- 11 3) Defendants are directed to immediately return the administration of the DACA program 12 to the state of its existence prior to the Rescission, using the same means, methods and 13 policies for considering and granting deferred action requests and requests for advance 14 parole as were utilized before the Rescission, including without limitation:
- 15 a. restoration of eligibility for initial requests for deferred action and associated
 - 16 employment authorization;
 - 17 b. restoration of eligibility for renewals for deferred action and associated
 - 18 employment authorization;
 - 19 c. restoration of eligibility for requests for advance parole; and
 - 20 d. restoration of its policies relating to the use of information provided by DACA
 - 21 applicants and their employers.
